Violence In Madhya Pradesh

Communal tension flared in Bhagalpur, Bihar during an idol immersion ceremony when a Hindutva mob equipped with weapons targeted an Imambara on November 2. The mob stopped by the street and a man climbed up on the wall to wave a saffron flag while some other Hindu men were found raising Israeli flags near the holy edifice. (Reported by The Observer Post)

Leadership Message

November has been another month full of disturbing incidents, showing how deep the cracks in our society have become. Hate speech, mob violence, and discrimination seems to be spreading without much fear of consequences, making it clear that our unity as a country is under threat.

In Uttar Pradesh's Ballia district, two Muslim brothers were brutally killed over what started as a minor argument. It's heartbreaking to see how quickly disagreements turn into such horrific violence. Similarly, in Madhya Pradesh, the election season saw political leaders openly making hateful statements against Muslims, further dividing communities instead of bringing them together.

Cow vigilantes were active again this month, with a Muslim truck driver in Rajasthan being beaten mercilessly over accusations of cow smuggling. The incident was caught on video and has left the victim fighting for his life. In Jharkhand, another man was lynched for allegedly transporting beef, a claim with no proof, yet it cost him his life.

Attacks on religious sites are also becoming too common. In Karnataka, debates over banning Azaan created unnecessary tension, while in Himachal Pradesh, a mosque was vandalized, and hateful slogans were written on its walls. These acts are not just attacks on religious places but also on the idea of peaceful coexistence.

Social media continues to be a major platform for spreading hate. This month, several right-wing influencers shared videos targeting Muslims, calling for boycotts of their businesses, and spreading dangerous narratives. This kind of propaganda is fueling divisions and making things worse each and every day.

It's hard not to feel worried about where the direction we're heading as a country. We need our leaders to focus on bringing people together instead of tearing them apart. At the same time, all of us as citizens have to stand up against hate, whether it's in our neighborhoods, on social media, or in the larger society.

India's strength has always been its diversity. If we let hatred take over, we lose the very essence of what makes us proud to be Indian. Let's work together to protect our unity and build a future where everyone feels safe and respected.
