Leadership Message

September has been a distressing month, highlighting deep-rooted divisions and escalated tensions across various parts of India. The sheer number of incidents involving hate speech, violence, and communal discord is worrying and reflects the fragility of our social fabric.

In Assam's Dhubri district, a young Muslim YouTuber was arrested for allegedly distorting a Bihu song. The reaction from Assam's Chief Minister was harsh, saying that Bihu is the lifeline of Assamese culture and any deviation is unacceptable. Meanwhile, a video emerged where a man openly threatened to demolish the Shahi Idgah Mosque in Mathura. When the police attempted to arrest him, he poured petrol on himself, creating a tense standoff.

The rise of cow vigilantism continued this month, with multiple incidents of brutal violence. A migrant laborer from West Bengal was lynched in Haryana over mere suspicion of consuming beef. Later, a Class 12 student in Haryana's Faridabad was chased and killed by cow vigilantes, who mistook him for a cattle smuggler. It's shocking to see how baseless allegations can lead to such brutal outcomes. Mob attacks on religious minorities were also reported, such as in Bihar's Nawada city, where a group disrupted a Christian prayer meeting, accusing attendees of attempting religious conversions. In Uttarakhand, shops run by Muslims were vandalized after accusations were made against a member of the community.

Religious sites were not spared either. Mosques in Delhi, Gujarat, and Himachal Pradesh faced threats and vandalism. There was even an uproar in Shimla, Himachal Pradesh, against an "illegal" mosque construction, with some leaders calling for this "Shimla model" to be applied across the country. On social media, influential figures and right-wing leaders continued to spread fear and provoke hostility. The month ended with shocking comments from a right-wing poet calling for a war against Indian Muslims and mob lynchings in Uttar Pradesh and Maharashtra.

These incidents make it clear that there is an urgent need for unity and responsible leadership. Law enforcement and political leaders must ensure that they do not further inflame tensions. And we, as citizens, need to stand against hate in all its forms because at the end of the day, it's the harmony and diversity of our communities that define India's true strength.
