JEM's Introduction

Rigorously documenting and addressing hate crimes targeting minority communities in India.

Justice and Empowerment of Minorities

A Jamiat Ulama-i-Hind Initiative

The Justice and Empowerment of Minorities (JEM) is committed to rigorously documenting and addressing hate crimes targeting minority communities in India. This quarterly report provides an extensive analysis of the period from July to September 2024, highlighting a notable escalation in the occurrence and intensity of such incidents. The report aims to offer a thorough and empirical understanding of the current state of hate crimes in India. By carefully detailing these developments, our objective is to facilitate evidence-based decision-making and to advocate for targeted interventions aimed at effectively addressing these critical societal challenges.

Executive Summary

In the third quarter of 2024, India has seen a troubling increase in hate crimes targeting the minorities, with 229 cases verified and documented. This alarming pattern calls for urgent attention and action. The Justice and Empowerment of Minorities (JEM) has prepared this comprehensive report to analyze the nature, distribution, and implications of these incidents. The findings are based on reliable data from mainstream media, social media reports, ensuring a high level of accuracy and credibility.

Analysis

Report

< Data Collection & Verification

Data were systematically collected from a wide array of secondary sources, including reputable news outlets, social media platforms, and video evidence. Each reported incident underwent a stringent verification process, which involved cross-referencing information from multiple sources to establish evidence credibility and authenticity.

The verification process included identifying inconsistencies, corroborating witness accounts, and assessing the reliability of the sources. This rigorous approach ensured that only verified and credible information was included in the report, effectively filtering out any unverified or questionable claims.

< Categorization

Incidents were methodically categorized into distinct types, including Physical Assaults, Hate Speech, and Damage to Religious Property, Police Misconduct, and other Forms of Violence. This systematic classification allowed for targeted analysis and helped identify patterns and trends within the data.

Analysis Tools

An advanced Excel dashboard was adopted for data compilation and analytical modeling. This sophisticated tool enabled the categorization of incidents, trend analysis, and the creation of visual representations. These visual aids provided valuable insights and significantly enhanced the overall understanding of the data.

Overview of Hate Crimes

In the third quarter of 2024, we tracked a total of 229 hate crime incidents. These incidents were carefully recorded and looked at in detail to understand their nature and impact. By sorting these cases into categories like violence, hate speech, and property damage, we get a clearer picture of how widespread and varied these crimes are. This detailed breakdown helps us perceive the big picture of the challenges faced by minority communities and is important for figuring out how to tackle these issues effectively. Incident Distribution

Minority Groups

Analysis:

The data reveals that Muslims are the most frequently targeted minority group, with 221 incidents accounting for 96.5% of the total. This overwhelming figure highlights a severe and disproportionate level of targeting, underscoring the extent of bias and prejudice against the Muslim community. The data suggests a pattern of systemic discrimination and intolerance, reflecting deep-rooted societal and ideological biases.

Dalits and Christians, each with 4 incidents (1.75%), are the next most affected groups, indicating that discrimination is not only confined to religious lines but also intersects with caste-based prejudices. While their figures are relatively low compared to those for Muslims, they nonetheless illustrate that intolerance and targeted violence impact multiple marginalized groups within society.

Sikhs and Tribals, with no recorded incidents, appear less affected according to the data, but this absence could also indicate underreporting or different patterns of targeting not captured in this dataset.

Overall, the analysis points to a broader societal issue of discrimination and intolerance. While Muslims are disproportionately being targeted, the involvement of other minority groups signifies a widespread and systemic problem that demands urgent attention to promote equality and justice for all the communities.

Types of Incidents

Analysis:

Acts of Hate and Violence make up the majority of incidents, reflecting the aggressive nature of these crimes. Together, these categories indicate a troubling trend of hostility and physical confrontations targeted at minority communities.

Acts of Hate, which include verbal abuse, hate speech, and harassment, account for 42.36% of the total incidents. This high percentage points to a widespread prevalence of intolerance and discriminatory rhetoric aimed at demeaning and alienating certain communities.

Acts of Violence, contributing 30.13% of incidents, signify a substantial level of direct physical confrontations and attacks against minority individuals. The high occurrence of such incidents demonstrates the dangerous escalation from hateful speech to violent actions.

Attacks on Religious Spaces, at 7.42%, involve targeted assaults on the cultural and religious symbols of minority communities. These attacks are not only physical but also symbolic, aiming to erode the identity and security of these communities.

Police Atrocities, constituting 8.30% of the total incidents, suggest systemic issues within law enforcement. Such cases reveal bias and improper handling of situations involving minority groups, further perpetuating their sense of insecurity and lack of trust in authorities.

State-Sponsored Discrimination, with 10.04% of the incidents, involves actions or policies endorsed by government bodies that lead to unfair treatment of minority communities. This highlights the role of state mechanisms in contributing to discrimination and marginalization.

Discrimination, Exclusion & Prejudice 0.87% and Media Manipulation and Distortion of Facts 0.44% are less frequent but still significant as they underscore the pervasive nature of bias, both in societal attitudes and the media narrative. These incidents show how prejudice can steep into various aspects of society, reinforcing negative stereotypes and justify the further aspects discrimination.

Incident Distribution Indian States

Analysis

Uttar Pradesh, Madhya Pradesh, Maharashtra, and Assam have recorded the highest number of incidents, indicating a concentration of hate crimes that may be influenced by the specific regional factors. These could include local political dynamics, social tensions contributing to the elevated rates of such crimes. Understanding these regional influences is crucial for effectively addressing and reducing hate crimes in these areas. Uttar Pradesh stands out with the highest number of incidents, totalling 73 cases, which constitutes 31.9% of all reported incidents. This significant figure reflects the state's complex regional political dynamics and communal tensions that exacerbated the occurrence of hate crimes.

Madhya Pradesh follows with 13 incidents, accounting for 5.7% of the total, indicating its own set of local challenges.

Maharashtra and Assam report 10 incidents 4.4% and 9 incidents 3.9%, respectively. While these numbers are lower than those seen in Uttar Pradesh, they still highlight concerning trends of intolerance in these states. Collectively, the "Other States" category accounts for 123 incidents, which is 53.8% of the total. This suggests a widespread issue of hate crimes across various regions, pointing to varying levels of law enforcement effectiveness and differing off the political commitments to addressing these crimes.

Perpetrator Affiliation

Analysis

The significant involvement of political groups and religious extremists in hate crimes highlights the organized and ideologically driven nature of these attacks. Additionally, the high number of unknown perpetrators underscores the challenges in identifying and prosecuting offenders.

Political groups are responsible for 63 incidents, constituting 27.5% of the total.

Religious extremists are linked to 61 incidents, representing 26.6% of the total.

Right-wing groups also account for 63 incidents, which makes up 27.5%. Furthermore, unknown perpetrators account for 42 incidents, or 18.4% of the total.

Legal Status of Incidents

Analysis

The recent hate crime data reveals significant challenges in legal responses and their accountability. Arrests have been made in 104 incidents, constituting 45.5% of total cases, indicating some progress. However, with 65 incidents (28.5%) are still under investigation and 60 incidents (26%) seeing no action, the inefficiency of the legal process is concerning and weakens general public's confidence.

The involvement of political groups highlights the politicization of communal issues, while the participation of religious extremists in over a third of the incidents highlights the influence of radical ideologies. This situation calls for urgent reforms to enhance the efficiency of legal processes and strengthen the accountability measures, ensuring that all the perpetrators are held responsible and preventing future hate crimes. 82 incidents, or 28.5% of the total, are still under investigation. The significant number of incidents with unknown affiliations also points to challenges in the identification and prosecution of these perpetrators, often because of insufficient investigative processes. In 75 incidents, which constitute 26% of the total, no action has been taken. This represents a significant gap in the response to these cases, indicating that a notable portion of incidents remain unresolved and have not yet been addressed through legal or investigative measures.

Monthly Breakdown

Analysis:

The relatively consistent distribution of incidents across July, August, and September indicates a persistent issue with hate crimes. In July, there were 94 incidents, accounting for 41.0% of the total. August saw a slight decrease, with 85 incidents representing 37.1%. September reported 48 incidents, making up 20.9%. These figures reveal a troubling trend in the frequency of hate crimes, underscoring that this remains a significant concern in our society. The steady rate of incidents throughout these months shows that hate crimes continued to be the persistent problem.

July 2024

In July 2024, communal tensions escalated sharply, marked by 94 reported incidents of violence and hate speech. These incidents underscore the ongoing challenges of violence against minorities and religious discrimination in the community.

Hate Detectors \(X\) shared a video. "First, Miya Muslims buy land in Hindu villages, then invite others to settle. They start eating beef, causing Hindus to leave & relocate. This is "Land Jihad." Many Hindus from Dhubri, Barpeta, and Nalbari in Assam have left similarly. No other CM has spoken about this before." - Assam CM Himanta Biswa Sarma.

Advocacy & Insights:

In response to the alarming rise in hate crimes against Muslim communities in August 2024, letters were sent to the Chief Ministers of Maharashtra, Odisha, Madhya Pradesh, Rajasthan, and Uttar Pradesh. These communications called for urgent action to address the significant number of reported incidents, emphasizing the need for a comprehensive review of current measures and stronger safeguards to protect minority communities.

September 2024

In early September 2024, India witnessed a troubling surge in communal tensions marked by rising incidents of violence and discrimination against minorities. Political rhetoric increasingly reflected far-right sentiments, intensifying societal divides. The atmosphere of fear and hostility toward certain communities raised urgent concerns about social cohesion and the protection of cultural diversity.

Notable Incidents:

•Threatening Remarks: Leader Vows Violence Against Mosque Over Alleged Harm to Ramgiri Maharaj (5 September 2024)

Hindustan Times reported. "If you dare harm our Ramgiri Maharaj, we will enter your masjid (mosque) and hunt you down one by one. Keep this in mind," Rane was recorded as saying.

•Massive Protests Erupt in Mandi Over Alleged Illegal Construction at Mosque (13 September 2024)

broke out in Mandi city of Himanchal Pradesh on Friday against the alleged illegal construction at a mosque in the Jail Road area.

•Demolition Drive in Gujarat: Nine Religious Shrines, Including Mosques and Dargahs, Razed (29 September 2024)

Hindustan Times reported. Nine religious shrines, including mosques and dargahs, were razed as part of a demolition drive to clear encroachments in the Veraval area of Gir-Somnath district in Gujarat.

Advocacy & Insights:

The insights from these incidents reveal the intricate interplay of religious, social, and economic factors driving communal conflicts, highlighting the necessity for nuanced approaches to conflict resolution and community building. The correspondence points to concerning patterns, including the disproportionate targeting of minority communities and the involvement of extremist groups and political entities.

In response to the alarming rise in hate crimes documented in the second quarter of 2024, letters have been dispatched to the Chief Ministers of Gujarat, Himachal Pradesh, Telangana, Maharashtra, and Uttar Pradesh, emphasizing the urgent need for action in light of the significant number of reported incidents in these states.

Conclusion

The third quarter of 2024 has witnessed a concerning surge in hate crimes and attacks against minority communities in India, with 229 documented incidents highlighting the alarming scale of violence and discrimination. Muslims have been disproportionately affected, comprising a staggering 96.5% of the cases, which underscores the urgent need to address deep-rooted religious intolerance and systemic biases.

The nature of these incidents ranging from hate speech and physical violence to police misconduct and state-sponsored discrimination illustrates the complexity and severity of the issues at hand. The involvement of political groups and religious extremists reveals an organized and ideological impetus behind many of these attacks. Furthermore, the significant number of incidents with unknown perpetrators indicates challenges in identifying and prosecuting offenders, exposing critical gaps in both legal and investigative frameworks. In light of these findings, it is clear that an immediate and comprehensive action is needed. Justice and Empowerment of Minorities (JEM) is dedicated for advocating the rights of minorities and addressing the changes needed to create an inclusive society.
